

ASSURANCE

J.C. Ryle (1816-1900)

"I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand."

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but to all those also who love His appearing." — 2Tim 4.6-8.

IN the words of Scripture which head this page, we see the Apostle Paul looking three ways: downward, backward, forward;

- downward to the grave
- backward to his own ministry
- forward to that great day, the Day of Judgment!

It will do us good to stand by the Apostle's side a few minutes, and mark the words he uses. Happy is that soul who can look where Paul looked, and then speak as Paul spoke!

(a) He looks downward to the grave, and he does it without fear. Hear what he says: —

"I am ready to be offered." — I am like an animal brought to the place of sacrifice, and bound with cords to the very horns of the altar. The drink-offering, which generally accompanies the oblation, is already being poured out. The last ceremonies have been gone through. Every preparation has been made. It only remains to receive the death-blow, and then all is over.

"The time of my departure is at hand." — I am like a ship about to unmoor and put to sea. All on board is ready. I only wait to have the moorings cast off that fasten me to the shore, and I will then set sail, and begin my voyage.

These are remarkable words to come from the lips of a child of Adam like ourselves! Death is a solemn thing, and never so much so as when we see it close at hand. The grave is a chilling, heart-sickening place, and it is vain to pretend it has no terrors. Yet here is a mortal man who can look calmly into the narrow "house appointed for all living," and say, while he stands on the brink, "I see it all, and am not afraid."

(b) Let us listen to him again. He looks backward to his ministerial life, and he does it without shame. Hear what he says: —

"I have fought a good fight." — There he speaks as a soldier. I have fought that good fight with the world, the flesh, and the devil, from which so many shrink and draw back.

"I have finished my course." — There he speaks as one who has run for a prize. I have run the race marked out for me. I have gone over the ground appointed for me, however rough and steep. I have not turned aside because of difficulties, nor been discouraged by the length of the way. I am at last in sight of the goal.

"I have kept the faith." — There he speaks as a steward. I have held fast that glorious Gospel which was committed to my trust. I have not mingled it with man's traditions, nor spoiled its simplicity by adding my own inventions, nor allowed others to adulterate it without withstanding them to the face. "As a soldier — a runner — a steward," he seems to say, "I am not ashamed."

That Christian is happy who, as he quits the world, can leave such testimony behind him. A good conscience will save no man, wash away no sin, nor lift us one hair's breadth toward heaven. Yet a good conscience will be found a pleasant visitor at our bedside in a dying hour. There is a fine passage in Pilgrim's Progress which describes Old Honest's passage across the river of death. "The river," says Bunyan, "at that time overflowed its banks in some places; but Mr. Honest in his lifetime had spoken to one Good Conscience to meet him there — which he also did, and lent him his hand, and so helped him over." We may be sure there is a mine of truth in that passage.

(c) Let us hear the Apostle once more. He looks forward to the great day of reckoning, and he does it without doubt. Mark his words: — "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me at that day: and not to me only, but to all those also who love His appearing." — "A glorious reward," he seems to say, "is ready and laid up in store for me — even that crown which is only given to the righteous. In the great day of judgment, the Lord shall give this crown to me, and to all beside me who have loved Him as an unseen Saviour, and longed to see Him face to face. My work on earth is over. This one thing now remains for me to look forward to, and nothing more."

Let us observe that the Apostle speaks without any hesitation or distrust. He regards the crown as a sure thing, as his own already. He declares with unfaltering confidence his firm persuasion that the righteous Judge will give it to him. Paul was no stranger to all the circumstances and accompaniments of that solemn day to which he referred. The great white throne — the assembled world — the open books — the revealing of all secrets — the listening angels — the awful sentence — the eternal separation of the lost and saved — all these were things with which he was well acquainted. But none of these things moved him. His strong faith overleaped them all, and he saw only Jesus, his all-prevailing Advocate, and the blood of sprinkling, and sin washed away. "A crown," he says, "is laid up for me." "The Lord Himself shall give it to me." He speaks as if he saw it all with his own eyes.

Such are the main things which these verses contain. I will not speak of most of them, because I want to confine myself to the special subject of this paper. I will only try to consider one point in the passage. That point is the strong "assurance of hope," with which the Apostle looks forwards to his own prospects in the day of judgment.

I will do this more readily, because of the great importance which attaches to the subject of assurance, and the great neglect with which, I humbly conceive, it is often treated in this day.

But I will do it at the same time with fear and trembling. I feel that I am treading on very difficult ground, and that it is easy to speak rashly and unscripturally in this matter. The road between truth and error here is an especially a narrow pass; and if I am enabled to do good to some without doing harm to others, I will be very thankful.

There are four things I wish to bring forward in speaking of the subject of assurance, and it may clear our way if I name them at once.

I. First, then, I will try to show that an assured hope, such as Paul here expresses, is a true and Scriptural thing.

II. Secondly, I will make this broad concession — that a man may never arrive at this assured hope, and yet be saved.

III. Thirdly, I will give some reasons why an assured hope is to be exceedingly desired.

IV. Lastly, I will try to point out some causes why an assured hope is so seldom attained.

I ask special attention from all who take an interest in the great subject of this volume. If I am not greatly mistaken, there is a very close connection between true holiness and assurance. Before I close this paper, I hope to show my readers the nature of that connection. At present, I content myself with saying that where there is the most holiness, there is generally the most assurance.

I. First, then, I will try to show that an assured hope is a true and Scriptural thing.

Assurance, such as Paul expresses in the verses which head this paper, is not a mere fancy or feeling. It is not the result of high animal spirits, or a sanguine temperament of body. It is a positive gift of the Holy Ghost, bestowed without reference to men's bodily frames or constitutions, and a gift which every believer in Christ ought to aim at and seek after.

In matters like these, the first question is this: What does the Scripture say? I answer that question without the least hesitation. The Word of God appears to me to teach distinctly that a believer may arrive at an assured confidence with regard to his own salvation.

I lay it down fully and broadly, as God's truth, that a true Christian, a converted man, may reach such a comfortable degree of faith in Christ, that in general he will feel entirely confident as to the pardon and safety of his soul — he will seldom be troubled with doubts — seldom be distracted with fears — seldom be distressed by anxious questionings — and in short, though vexed by many an inward conflict with sin, will look forward to death without trembling, and to judgment without dismay. ¹ This, I say, is the doctrine of the Bible.

Such is my account of assurance. I will ask my readers to mark it well. I say neither less nor more than I have laid down here.

Now, such a statement as this is often disputed and denied. Many cannot see the truth of it at all.

The Church of Rome denounces assurance in the most unmeasured terms. The Council of Trent roundly declares that a "believer's assurance of the pardon of his sins is a vain and ungodly confidence;" and Cardinal Bellarmine, the well-known champion of Romanism, calls it "a prime error of heretics."

The vast majority of the worldly and thoughtless Christians among ourselves oppose the doctrine of assurance. It offends and annoys them to hear of it. They do not like others to feel comfortable and sure, because they never feel so themselves. Ask them whether their sins are forgiven, and they will probably tell you they do not know! That they cannot receive the doctrine of assurance is certainly no marvel.

But there are also some true believers who reject assurance, or shrink from it as a doctrine fraught with danger. They consider that it borders on presumption. They seem to think it is a proper humility never to feel sure, never to be confident, and to live in a certain degree of doubt and suspense about their souls. This is to be regretted, and it does much harm.

I frankly allow that there are some presumptuous persons who profess to feel a confidence for which they have no Scriptural warrant. There are always some people who think well of themselves when God thinks ill of them, just as there are some who think ill of themselves when God thinks well of them. There will always be such. There never yet was a Scriptural truth without abuses and counterfeits. God's election — man's impotence — salvation by grace — all alike are abused. There will be fanatics and enthusiasts as long as the world stands. But for all this, assurance is a reality and a true thing; and God's children must not let themselves be driven from the use of a truth, merely because it is abused. ²

My answer to all who deny the existence of real, well-grounded assurance, is simply this: What does the Scripture say? If assurance is not there, I do not have another word to say.

- But does Job not say, “I know that my Redeemer lives, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh I shall see God”? (Job 19.25, 26)
- Does David not say, “Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for You are with me; your rod and your staff they comfort me”? (Psa 23.4)
- Does Isaiah not say, “You will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on You, because he trusts in You”? (Isa 26.3)
- And again, “The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness, and assurance forever.” (Isa 32.17)
- Does Paul not say to the Romans, “I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord”? (Rom 8.38, 39)
- Does he not say to the Corinthians, “We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens “? (2Cor 5.1)
- And again, “We are always confident, knowing that while we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord.” (2Cor 5.6)
- Does he not say to Timothy, “I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed to Him”? (2Tim 1.12)

² We do not vindicate every vain pretender to ‘the witness of the spirit’; we are aware that there are those in whose professions of religion we can see nothing but their forwardness and confidence to recommend them. But let us not reject any doctrine of revelation through an over-anxious fear of consequences.” — Robinson's Christian System.

“True assurance is built upon a Scripture basis: presumption has no Scripture to show for its warrant; it is like a will without seal and witnesses, which is null and void in law. Presumption lacks both the witness of the Word and the seal of the Spirit. Assurance always keeps the heart in a lowly posture; but presumption is bred of pride. Feathers fly up, but gold descends; he who has this golden assurance, his heart descends in humility.” — Watson's Body of Divinity. 1650.

“Presumption is joined with looseness of life; persuasion with a tender conscience. Presumption dares sin because it is sure; persuasion dares not sin for fear of losing assurance. Persuasion will not sin, because it cost her Saviour so dear; presumption will sin, because grace abounds. Humility is the way to heaven. Those who are proudly secure of going to heaven do not so often come there, as those who are afraid of going to hell.” — Adams on Second Epistle of Peter. 1633.

- And does he not speak to the Colossians of “the full assurance of understanding” (Col 2.2), and to the Hebrews of the “full assurance of faith,” and the “full assurance of hope”? (Heb 6.11; 10.22)
- Does Peter not expressly say, “Give diligence to make your calling and election sure”? (2Pet 1.10)
- Does John not say, “We know that we have passed from death unto life”? (1Joh 3.14)
- And again, “These things I have written to you who believe on the name of the Son of God, that you may know that you have eternal life.” (1Joh 5.13)
- And again, “We know that we are of God.” (1Joh 5.19)

What will we say to these things? I desire to speak with all humility on any controverted point. I feel that I am only a poor fallible child of Adam myself. But I must say that in the passages I have just quoted, I see something far higher than the mere “hopes” and “trusts,” with which so many believers appear content in this day. I see the language of persuasion, confidence, knowledge — indeed, I may almost say, of certainty. And I feel, for my own part, if I may take these Scriptures in their plain and obvious meaning, the doctrine of assurance is true.

But my answer, furthermore, to all who dislike the doctrine of assurance, as bordering on presumption, is this: It can hardly be presumption to tread in the steps of Peter, and Paul, of Job, and of John. They were all eminently humble and lowly-minded men, if ever any were such; and yet they all speak of their own state with an assured hope. Surely this should teach us that deep humility and strong assurance are perfectly compatible, and that there is no necessary connection between spiritual confidence and pride. ³

My answer, furthermore, is that many have attained to such an assured hope as our text expresses, even in modern times. I will not concede for a moment that it was a peculiar privilege confined to the Apostolic day. There have been in our own land many believers who have appeared to walk in almost uninterrupted fellowship with the Father and the Son — who have seemed to enjoy an almost unceasing sense of the light of God’s reconciled countenance shining down upon them, and have left their experience on record. I could mention well-known names, if space permitted. The thing has been, and it is — and that is enough.

My answer, lastly, is that it cannot be wrong to feel confidently in a matter where God speaks unconditionally — to believe decidedly when God promises decidedly — to have a sure persuasion of pardon and peace when we rest on the word and oath of Him who never changes. It is an utter mistake to suppose that the believer who feels assurance is resting on anything he sees in himself. He simply leans on the Mediator of the New Covenant, and the Scripture of truth. He believes the Lord Jesus means what He says, and he takes Him at His word. Assurance, after all, is no more than a full-grown faith; a masculine faith that grasps Christ’s promise with both hands — a faith that argues like the good centurion, “If the Lord “only speaks the word,” I am healed. Why then should I doubt? (Mat8.8) ⁴

We may be sure that Paul was the last man in the world to build his assurance on anything of his own. He who could write himself down as “chief of sinners” (1Tim 1.15), had a deep sense of his guilt and corruption. But then, he had a still deeper sense of the length and breadth of Christ’s righteousness imputed to him. — He who could cry, “O wretched man that I am” (Rom 7.24), had a clear view of the fountain of evil within his heart. But then, he had a still clearer view of that other Fountain which can remove “all sin and uncleanness.” He who thought himself “less than the least of all saints” (Eph 3.8), had a lively and abiding feeling of his own weakness. But he had a still livelier feeling that Christ’s promise, “My sheep shall never perish” (Joh 10.28), could not be broken. — Paul knew, if ever any man did, that he was a poor, frail bark, floating on a stormy ocean. He saw, if anyone did, the rolling waves and roaring tempest by which he was surrounded. But then, he looked away from self to Jesus, and was not afraid. He remembered that anchor within the veil, which is both “sure and steadfast.” (Heb 6.19) He remembered the word, and work, and constant intercession of Him that loved him and gave Himself for him. And it was this, and nothing else, that enabled him to say so boldly, “A crown is laid up for me, and the Lord shall give it to me;” and to conclude so surely, “The Lord will preserve me; I shall never be confounded.”⁵

I may not dwell longer on this part of the subject. I think it will be allowed that I have shown some good ground for the assertion I made, that assurance is a true thing.

II. I pass on to the second thing that I spoke of. I said, a believer may never arrive at this assured hope, which Paul expresses, and yet be saved.

I grant this most freely. I do not dispute it for a moment. I would not desire to make one contrite heart sad that God has not made sad, or to discourage one fainting child of God, or to leave the impression that men have no part or lot in Christ unless they feel assurance.

A person may have saving faith in Christ, and yet never enjoy an assured hope such as the Apostle Paul enjoyed. To believe and have a glimmering hope of acceptance is one thing; to have “joy and peace” in our believing, and to abound in hope, is quite another. All God’s children have faith; not all have assurance. I think this should never be forgotten.

I know some great and good men have held a different opinion. I believe that many excellent ministers of the Gospel, at whose feet I would gladly sit, do not allow the distinction I have stated. But I desire to call no man master. I dread as much as anyone the idea of healing the wounds of conscience too easily; but I should think any other view

“If the ground of our assurance rested in and on ourselves, it might justly be called presumption; but being grounded on the Lord and the power of His might, those who account assured confidence thereon to be presumption, either do not know what the might of His power is, or else they too lightly esteem it.” — Gouge’s Whole Armour of God. 1647.

⁵ “Upon what ground is this certainty built? Surely not upon anything that is in us. Our assurance of perseverance is grounded wholly upon God. If we look upon ourselves, we see cause for fear and doubting; but if we look up to God, we will find cause enough for assurance.” — Hildersam on John iv. 1632.

“Our hope is not hung upon such an untwisted thread as, ‘I imagine so,’ or ‘It is likely;’ but the cable, the strong rope of our fastened anchor, is the oath and promise of Him who is eternal verity. Our salvation is fastened with God’s own hand, and Christ’s own strength, to the strong stake of God’s unchangeable nature.” — Rutherford’s Letters. 1637.

“Never did a believer in Jesus Christ die or drown in his voyage to heaven. They will all be found safe and sound with the Lamb on Mount Zion. Christ loses none of them; indeed nothing of them. (Joh 6.39) Not a bone of a believer is to be seen in the field of battle. They are all more than conquerors through Him that loved them.” (Rom 8.37) — Traill.

than what I have given, is a most uncomfortable Gospel to preach, and one very likely to keep souls back a long time from the gate of life. ⁶

I do not shrink from saying that by grace a man may have sufficient faith to flee to Christ; sufficient faith to really lay hold on Him — to really trust in Him — to really be a child of God — to really be saved; and yet to his last day, never be free from much anxiety, doubt, and fear.

“A letter,” says an old writer, “may be written, which is not sealed; so grace may be written in the heart, and yet the Spirit may not set the seal of assurance to it.”

A child may be born heir to a great fortune, and yet never be aware of his riches; may live childish, die childish, and never know the greatness of his possessions. And so also, a man may be a babe in Christ’s family, think as a babe, speak as a babe, and though saved, never enjoy a lively hope, or know the real privileges of his inheritance.

Let no man mistake my meaning when I dwell strongly on the reality, privilege, and importance of assurance. Do not do me the injustice of saying that I teach that none are saved except those who can say with Paul, “I know and am persuaded — there is a crown laid up for me.” I do not say so. I teach nothing of the kind.

A man must have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, beyond all question, if he is to be saved. I know no other way of access to the Father. I see no intimation of mercy, except through Christ. A man must feel his sins and lost estate — he must come to Jesus for pardon and salvation — he must rest his hope on Him, and on Him alone. But if he only has faith to do this, however weak and feeble that faith may be, I will engage from Scripture warrants, that he will not miss heaven.

Never, never let us curtail the freeness of the glorious Gospel, or clip its fair proportions. Never let us make the gate straiter and the way narrower than pride and the love of sin have made it already. The Lord Jesus is very pitiful, and of tender mercy. He does not regard the quantity of faith, but the quality: He does not measure its degree, but its truth. He will not break any bruised reed, nor quench any smoking flax. He will never let it be said that any perished at the foot of the cross. “Whoever comes to Me,” He says, “I will by no means cast out.” (Joh 6.37) ⁷

Yes! Though a man’s faith is no bigger than a grain of mustard seed, if it only brings him to Christ, and enables him to touch the hem of His garment, he shall be saved — saved as surely as the oldest saint in paradise — saved as completely and eternally as Peter, or John, or Paul. There are degrees in our sanctification. In our justification there are none. What is written, is written, and it shall never fail: “Whoever believes in Him,” — not whoever has a strong and mighty faith — “Whoever believes in Him, shall not be ashamed.” (Rom 10.11)

But all this time, let it be remembered, the poor believing soul may have no full assurance of his pardon and acceptance with God. He may be troubled with fear upon fear, and doubt upon doubt. He may have many an inward question, and many an anxiety — many a struggle, and many a misgiving — clouds and darkness — storm and tempest to the very end.

I will engage, I repeat, that bare simple faith in Christ will save a man though he may never attain to assurance; but I will not engage that it will bring him to heaven with strong and abounding consolations. I will engage that it will land him safe in harbour; but I will not engage that he will enter that harbour in full sail, confident and rejoicing. I will not be surprised if he reaches his desired haven weather-beaten and tempest-tossed, scarcely realizing his own safety, till he opens his eyes in glory.

I believe it is of great importance to keep in view this distinction between faith and assurance. It explains things which an inquirer in religion sometimes finds it hard to understand.

Faith, let us remember, is the root, and assurance is the flower. Doubtless you can never have the flower without the root; but it is no less certain that you may have the root and not the flower.

Faith is that poor trembling woman who came behind Jesus in the press [of the crowd], and touched the hem of His garment. (Mar 5.25) Assurance is Stephen standing calmly in the midst of his murderers, and saying, “I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing at the right hand of God.” (Act 7. 56)

Faith is the penitent thief crying, “Lord, remember me.” (Luk 23.42) Assurance is Job, sitting in the dust, covered with sores, saying, “I know that my Redeemer lives” (Job 19.25); “Though He slay me, yet I will trust Him.” (Job 13.15)

Faith is Peter’s drowning cry as he began to sink: “Lord save, me!” (Mat 14.30) Assurance is that same Peter declaring before the Council afterward, “This is the stone which was rejected by you builders, which has become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.” (Act 4.11, 12)

Faith is the anxious, trembling voice, “Lord, I believe: help my unbelief.” (Mar 9.24) Assurance is the confident challenge, “Who shall lay anything to the charge of God’s elect? Who is he that condemns?” (Rom 8.33, 34) Faith is Saul praying in the house of Judas at Damascus — sorrowful, blind, and alone. (Act 9.11) Assurance is Paul, the aged prisoner, looking calmly into the grave, and saying, “I know whom I have believed. There is a crown laid up for me.” (2Tim 1.12; 4.8)

Faith is life. How great the blessing! Who can describe or realize the gulf between life and death? “A living dog is better than a dead lion.” (Ecc 9.4) And yet life may be weak, sickly, unhealthy, painful, trying, anxious, weary, burdensome, joyless, smileless to the very end. Assurance is more than life. It is health, strength, power, vigour, activity, energy, manliness, beauty.

It is not a question of “saved or not saved,” that lies before us, but of “privilege or no privilege.” — It is not a question of peace or no peace, but of great peace or little peace. —

It is not a question between the wanderers of this world and the school of Christ: it is someone who belongs to the school only: it is between the first form and the last.⁸

He that has faith does well. I would be happy if I thought all readers of this paper had it. Blessed, thrice blessed are those who believe! They are safe. They are washed. They are justified. They are beyond the power of hell. Satan, with all his malice, shall never pluck them out of Christ's hand. But he that has assurance does far better — he sees more, feels more, knows more, enjoys more, has more days like those spoken of in Deuteronomy, even “the days of heaven upon the earth.” (Deu 11.21)⁹

III. I pass on to the third thing of which I spoke. I will give some reasons why an assured hope is exceedingly to be desired.

I ask special attention to this point. I heartily wish that assurance was more sought after than it is. Too many among those who believe, begin doubting and go on doubting, live doubting and die doubting, and go to heaven in a kind of mist.

It would not become me to speak in a slighting way about “hopes” and “trusts.” But I fear that many of us sit down content with them, and go no further. I would like to see fewer “perhaps” in the Lord's family, and more who could say, “I know and am persuaded.” Oh, that all believers would covet the best gifts, and not be content with less! Many miss the full tide of blessedness that the Gospel was meant to convey. Many keep themselves in a low and starved condition of soul, while their Lord is saying, “Eat and drink abundantly, O beloved.” “Ask and receive, that your joy may be full.” (Song 5.1; Joh 16.24)

(1) Let us remember then, for one thing, that assurance is to be desired, because of the present comfort and peace it affords.

Doubts and fears have power to spoil much of the happiness of a true believer in Christ. Uncertainty and suspense are bad enough in any condition — in the matter of our health, our property, our families, our affections, our earthly callings — but never so bad as in the affairs of our souls. And so long as a believer cannot get beyond “I hope,” and “I trust,” he manifestly feels a degree of uncertainty about his spiritual state. The very words imply as much. He says, “I hope,” because he dares not say, “I know.”

Now, assurance goes far to set a child of God free from this painful kind of bondage, and thus it ministers mightily to his comfort. It enables him to feel that the great business of life is a settled business, the great debt a paid debt, the great disease a healed disease, and the great work a finished work; and all other business, diseases, debts, and works, are then small by comparison. In this way, assurance makes him,

- patient in tribulation,
- calm under bereavements,
- unmoved in sorrow,
- not afraid of evil tidings, and
- content in every condition,

⁸ That is, a lower classman in school versus an upper classman (British “forms” are levels of schooling).

⁹ “The greatest thing that we can desire, next to the glory of God, is our own salvation; and the sweetest thing we can desire is the assurance of our salvation. In this life we cannot get higher than to be assured of that which is to be enjoyed in the next life. All saints shall enjoy a heaven when they leave this earth; some saints enjoy a heaven while they are here on earth.” — Joseph Caryl. 1653.

for it gives him a FIXEDNESS of heart.

- It sweetens his bitter cups;
- it lessens the burden of his crosses;
- it smooths the rough places over which he travels;
- it lightens the valley of the shadow of death.

It makes him always feel that he has something solid beneath his feet and something firm under his hands — a sure friend by the way, and a sure home at the end. ¹⁰

Assurance will help a man to bear poverty and loss. It will teach him to say, “I know that I have a better and more enduring substance in heaven. I have no silver and gold, but grace and glory are mine, and these can never make themselves wings and fly away. Though the fig tree will not blossom, yet I will rejoice in the Lord.” (Hab 3.17, 18)

Assurance will support a child of God under the heaviest bereavements, and assist him to feel “It is well.” An assured soul will say, “Though beloved ones are taken from me, yet Jesus is the same, and is alive forevermore. Christ, being raised from the dead, dies no more. Though my house is not as flesh and blood could wish, yet I have an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure.” (2Kng 4.26; Heb 13.8; Rom 6.9; 2Sam 23.5)

Assurance will enable a man to praise God, and be thankful, even in prison, like Paul and Silas at Philippi. It can give a believer songs even in the darkest night, and joy when all things seem to be going against him. ¹¹ (Job 35.10; Psa 42.8)

Assurance will enable a man to sleep with the full prospect of death on the morrow, like Peter in Herod’s dungeon. It will teach him to say, “I will both lay me down in peace and sleep, for You only, Lord, make me dwell in safety.” (Psa 4.8)

Assurance can make a man rejoice to suffer shame for Christ’s sake, as the Apostles did when put in prison at Jerusalem. (Act 5.41) It will remind him that he may “rejoice and be exceeding glad” (Mat 5.12), and that in heaven there is an exceeding weight of glory that will make amends for all. (2Cor 4.17)

Assurance will enable a believer to meet a violent and painful death without fear, as Stephen did in the beginning of Christ’s Church, and as Cranmer, Ridley, Hooper, Latimer, Rogers, and Taylor did in our own land. It will bring to his heart the texts, “Do

“Assurance will assist us in all duties: it will arm us against all temptations; it will answer all objections; it will sustain us in all conditions into which the saddest of times can bring us. ‘If God is for us, who can be against us?’” — Bishop Reynolds on Hosea 14. 1642.

“We cannot come amiss to him that has assurance. God is his. Has he lost a friend? — his father lives. Has he lost an only child? — God has given him His only Son. Has he scarcity of bread? — God has given him the finest of the wheat, the bread of life. Are his comforts gone? — he has a Comforter. Does he meet with storms? — he knows where to put in for harbour. God is his Portion, and heaven is his haven.” — Thomas Watson. 1662.

¹¹ These were John Bradford’s words in prison, shortly before his execution: “I have no request to make. If Queen Mary gives me my life, I will thank her; if she banishes me, I will thank her; if she burns me, I will thank her; if she condemns me to perpetual imprisonment, I will thank her.”

This was Rutherford’s experience when banished to Aberdeen: “How blind are my adversaries, who sent me to a banqueting house, and not to a prison or a place of exile.” “My prison is a palace to me, and Christ’s banqueting house.” — Letters.

not be afraid of those who kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.” (Luk 12.4) “Lord Jesus receive my spirit.” (Act 7.59) ¹²

Assurance will support a man in pain and sickness, make all his bed, and smooth down his dying pillow. It will enable him to say, “If my earthly house fails, I have a building of God.” (2Cor 5.1) “I desire to depart and be with Christ.” (Phi 1.23) “My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever. ¹³ (Psa 73.26)

The strong consolation which assurance can give in the hour of death is a point of great importance. We may depend on it, we will never think assurance so precious as when our turn comes to die. In that awful hour there are few believers who do not find the value and privilege of an “assured hope,” whatever they may have thought about it during their lives. General “hopes” and “trusts” are all very well to live on while the sun shines and the body is strong; but when we come to die, we want to be able to say, “I know” and “I feel.” The river of death is a cold stream, and we have to cross it alone. No earthly friend can help us. The last enemy, the king of terrors, is a strong foe. When our souls are departing, there is no cordial like the strong wine of assurance.

There is a beautiful expression in the Prayer-book service for the Visitation of the Sick: “The Almighty Lord, who is a most strong tower to all those who put their trust in Him, be now and evermore your defence, and make you know and feel that there is no other name under heaven, through whom you may receive health and salvation, but only the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.” The compilers of that service showed great wisdom there. They saw that when the eyes grow dim, and the heart grows faint, and the spirit is on the eve of departing, there must then be knowing and feeling what Christ has done for us, or else there cannot be perfect peace. ¹⁴

(2) Let us remember, for another thing, that assurance is to be desired, because it tends to make a Christian an active working Christian.

None, generally speaking, do so much for Christ on earth as those who enjoy the fullest confidence of a free entrance into heaven, and do not trust in their own works, but in the finished work of Christ. That sounds wonderful, I dare say, but it is true.

A believer who lacks an assured hope, will spend much of his time in inward searchings of heart about his own state. Like a nervous hypochondriac, he will be full of his own ailments, his own doubts and questions, his own conflicts and corruptions. In short, you

¹³ These were Rutherford’s words on his death-bed: “O that all my brethren knew what a Master I have served, and what peace I have this day! I shall sleep in Christ, and when I awake I shall be satisfied with His likeness.” 1661.

These were Baxter’s words on his death-bed: “I bless God I have a well-grounded assurance of my eternal happiness, and great peace and comfort within.” Towards the close he was asked how he did. The answer was, “Almost well.” 1691.

will often find that he is so taken up with his internal warfare, that he has little leisure for other things, and little time to work for God.

But a believer who has, like Paul, an assured hope, is free from these harassing distractions. He does not vex his soul with doubts about his own pardon and acceptance. He looks at the everlasting covenant sealed with blood — at the finished work and never-the-broken word of his Lord and Saviour — and therefore he counts his salvation a settled thing. And thus he is able to give undivided attention to the work of the Lord, and so, to do more in the long run. ¹⁵

Take for an illustration of this, two English emigrants. Suppose they are set down side by side in New Zealand or Australia. Give each of them a piece of land to clear and cultivate. Let the portions allotted to them be the same, both in quantity and quality. Secure that land to them by every needful legal instrument; let it be conveyed as freehold to them and theirs forever; let the conveyance be publicly registered, and the property made sure to them by every deed and security that man's ingenuity can devise.

Then suppose that one of them sets to work to clear his land and cultivate it, and labours at it day after day without intermission or cessation.

Suppose that meanwhile the other continually leaves his work, and repeatedly goes to the public registry to ask whether the land is really his own — whether there is some mistake — whether there is, after all, some flaw in the legal instruments which conveyed it to him.

The one will never doubt his title, but just work diligently on. The other will hardly ever feel sure of his title, and spend half his time going to Sydney or Melbourne or Auckland, with needless inquiries about it.

Now, which of these two men will have made the most progress in a year's time? Who will have done the most for his land, gotten the greatest breadth of soil under tillage, have the best crops to show, and be altogether the most prosperous?

Anyone of common sense can answer that question. I do not need to supply an answer. There can only be one reply. Undivided attention will always attain the greatest success.

It is much the same in the matter of our title to "mansions in the skies." None will do so much for the Lord who bought him, as the believer who sees his title clear, and is not distracted by unbelieving doubts, questionings, and hesitations. The joy of the Lord will be that man's strength. "Restore unto me," says David, "the joy of your salvation; then I will teach transgressors Your ways." (Psa 51.12)

Never were there such working Christians as the Apostles. They seemed to live to labour. Christ's work was truly their food and drink. They did not count their lives dear to themselves. They spent and were spent. They laid down ease, health, and worldly comfort, at the foot of the cross. And one grand cause of this, I believe, was their assured hope.

¹⁵ "Assurance would make us active and lively in God's service; it would excite prayer, quicken obedience. Faith would make us walk, but assurance would make us run — we should think we could never do enough for God. Assurance would be as wings to the bird, as weights to the clock, to set all the wheels of obedience a-running." — Thomas Watson.

"Assurance will make a man fervent, constant, and abundant in the work of the Lord. When the assured Christian has done one work, he is calling out for another. — What is next, Lord, says the assured soul, what is next? An assured Christian will put his hand to any work, he will put his neck in any yoke for Christ — he never thinks he has done enough, he always thinks he had done too little; and when he has done all he can, he sits down, saying, I am an unprofitable servant". — Thomas Brooks.

They were men who could say, “We know that we are of God, and the whole world lies in wickedness.” (1Joh 5.19)

(3) Let us remember, for another thing, that assurance is to be desired, because it tends to make a Christian a decided Christian.

Indecision and doubt about our own state in God’s sight is a grievous evil, and it is the mother of many evils. It often produces a wavering and unstable walk in following the Lord. Assurance helps to cut many a knot, and to make the path of Christian duty clear and plain.

Many whom we hope are God’s children, and have true grace (however weak), are themselves continually perplexed with doubts in points of practice. “Should we do such and such a thing? Will we give up this family custom? Should we go into that company? How will we draw the line about visiting? What is to be the measure of our dress and entertainments? Are we never, under any circumstances, to dance, never to touch a card, never to attend parties of pleasure?” These are the kinds of questions which seem to give them constant trouble. And often, very often, the simple root of their perplexity is that they do not feel assured that they are children of God. They have not yet settled which side of the gate they are on. They do not know whether they are inside the ark or not.

They quite feel that a child of God ought to act in a certain decided way; but the grand question is, “Are they children of God themselves?” If they only felt they were so, they would go straightforward and take a decided line. But not feeling sure about it, their conscience is forever hesitating and coming to a deadlock. The devil whispers, “Perhaps, after all, you are only a hypocrite: what right do you have to take a decided course? Wait till you are really a Christian.” And this whisper too often turns the scale, and leads on to some miserable compromise, or wretched conformity to the world!

I believe we have here one chief reason why so many in this day are inconsistent, trimming, unsatisfactory, and half-hearted in their conduct about the world. Their faith fails. They feel no assurance that they are Christ’s, and so they feel a hesitancy about breaking with the world. They shrink from laying aside all the ways of the old man because they are not quite confident they have put on the new. In short, I have little doubt that one secret cause of “halting between two opinions” is lack of assurance. When people can say decidedly, “The Lord, He is the God,” their course becomes very clear. (1Kng 18.39)

(4) Let us remember, finally, that assurance is to be desired, because it tends to make the holiest Christians.

This, too, sounds wonderful and strange, and yet it is true. It is one of the paradoxes of the Gospel — contrary to reason and common sense at first sight; and yet it is a fact. Cardinal Bellarmine was seldom wider of the truth than when he said, “Assurance tends toward carelessness and sloth.” He that is freely forgiven by Christ will always do much for Christ’s glory; and he that enjoys the fullest assurance of this forgiveness will ordinarily keep up the closest walk with God. It is a faithful saying and worthy to be remembered by all believers, “He that has this hope in Him purifies himself, even as He is pure.” (1Joh 3.3) A hope that does not purify, is a mockery, a delusion, and a snare. ¹⁶

¹⁶ “The true assurance of salvation which the Spirit of God has wrought in any heart has that force to restrain a man from looseness of life, and to knit his heart in love and obedience to God, as nothing else has in all the world. It is

None are so likely to maintain a watchful guard over their own hearts and lives as those who know the comfort of living in close communion with God. They feel their privilege, and will fear losing it. They will dread falling from their high estate, and marring their own comforts, by bringing clouds between themselves and Christ. Someone who goes on a journey with little money, takes little thought of danger, and cares little how late he travels. Someone who carries gold and jewels, on the contrary, will be a cautious traveller. He will look well to his roads, his lodgings, and his company, and run no risks. It is an old saying, however unscientific it may be, that the fixed stars are those which tremble the most. The man who most fully enjoys the light of God's reconciled countenance, will be a man tremblingly afraid of losing its blessed consolations, and jealously fearful of doing anything to grieve the Holy Ghost.

I commend these four points to the serious consideration of all professing Christians. Would you like to feel the Everlasting Arms around you, Deu 33:27 and to hear the voice of Jesus daily drawing near to your soul, and saying, "I am your salvation"? Psa 35:3— Would you like to be a useful labourer in the vineyard in your day and generation? — Would you be known by all men as a bold, firm, decided, single-eyed, uncompromising follower of Christ? — Would you be eminently spiritually-minded and holy? — I do not doubt that some readers will say, "These are the very things our hearts desire. We long for them. We pant after them: but they seem far from us."

Now, has it never struck you that your neglect of assurance may possibly be the main secret of all your failures — that the low measure of faith which satisfies you may be the cause of your low degree of peace? Can you think it a strange thing that your graces are faint and languishing, when faith — the root and mother of them all — is allowed to remain feeble and weak?

Take my advice this day. Seek an increase of faith. Seek an assured hope of salvation like the Apostle Paul's. Seek to obtain a simple, childlike confidence in God's promises. Seek to be able to say with Paul, "I know whom I have believed: I am persuaded that He is mine, and I am His." 2Tim 1.12 certainly either the lack of faith and assurance of God's love, or a false and carnal assurance of it, that is the true cause of all the licentiousness that reigns in the world." — Hildersam 51st Psalm.

"None walk so evenly with God, as those who are assured of the love of God. Faith is the mother of obedience, and sureness of trust makes way for strictness of life. When men are loose from Christ, they are loose in point of duty, and their floating belief is soon discovered in their inconstancy and unevenness of walking. We do not, with alacrity, engage in something, the success of which we are doubtful; and therefore, when we do not know whether God will accept us or not, when we are off and on in point of trust, we are just so in the course of our lives, and serve God by fits and starts. It is the slander of the world to think assurance is an idle doctrine." — Manton's Exposition of James. 1660.

"Who is more obliged, or who feels the obligation to observance more cogently — the son who knows his near relation, and knows his father loves him? or the servant that has great reason to doubt it? Fear is a weak and impotent principle in comparison to love. Terrors may awaken: love enlivens. Terrors may 'almost persuade': love over-persuades. I am sure that a believer's knowledge that his Beloved is his, and that he is his Beloved's (Song 6.3), is found by experience to lay the strongest and most cogent obligations upon him to loyalty and faithfulness to the Lord Jesus. For as it is to him who believes Christ is precious (1Pet 2.7), so it is to him who knows he believes Christ is so much the more precious, even the 'chiefest of ten thousand.'" (Song 5.10) — Fairclough's Sermon in Morning Exercises. 1660.

"Is it necessary that men be kept in continual dread of damnation, in order to render them circumspect and ensure their attention to duty? Will not the well-grounded expectation of heaven prove far more efficacious? Love is the noblest and strangest principle of obedience; nor can it be but that a sense of God's love to us will increase our desire to please Him." — Robinson's Christian System.

You have very likely tried other ways and methods and completely failed. Change your plan. Take another tack. Lay aside your doubts. Lean more entirely on the Lord's arm. Begin with implicit trusting. Cast aside your faithless backwardness to take the Lord at His word. Come and roll yourself, your soul, and your sins, upon your gracious Saviour. Begin with simple believing, and all other things will soon be added to you. ¹⁷

IV. I come now to the last thing of which I spoke. I promised to point out some probable causes why an assured hope is so seldom attained. I will do it very briefly.

This is a very serious question, and it ought to raise in all of us great searchings of heart. Certainly, few of Christ's people seem to reach up to this blessed spirit of assurance. Many believe, but comparatively few are persuaded. Many have saving faith, but comparatively few have that glorious confidence which shines forth in the language of St. Paul. I think we must all admit that such is the case.

Now, why is this so? — Why is a thing which two Apostles have strongly enjoined us to seek after, a thing which few believers have any experiential knowledge of in these latter days? Why is an assured hope so rare?

I desire to offer a few suggestions on this point, with all humility. I know that many have never attained assurance, at whose feet I would gladly sit both in earth and heaven. Perhaps the Lord sees something in the natural temperament of some of His children, which makes assurance not good for them. Perhaps, in order to be kept in spiritual health, they need to be kept very low. God only knows. Still, after every allowance, I fear there are many believers without an assured hope, whose case may too often be explained by causes such as the following.

(1) One most common cause, I suspect, is a defective view of the doctrine of justification.

I am inclined to think that justification and sanctification are insensibly confused together in the minds of many believers. They receive the Gospel truth that there must be something done in us, as well as something done for us, if we are true members of Christ — and so far they are right. But then, without being aware of it, perhaps, they seem to imbibe the idea that their justification is in some degree affected by something within themselves. They do not clearly see that Christ's work, not their own work — either in whole or in part, either directly or indirectly — is alone the ground of our acceptance with God; that justification is a thing entirely without us, for which nothing whatever is needful on our part but simple faith — and that the weakest believer is as fully and completely justified as the strongest. ¹⁸

¹⁷ "That which breeds so much perplexity is that we would invert God's order. 'If I knew,' say some, 'that the promise belonged to me, and Christ was a Saviour to me, I could believe' — that is to say, I would first see and then believe. But the true method is just the contrary: 'I would have fainted,' says David, 'unless I had believed I would see the goodness of the Lord.' He believed it first, and saw it afterwards." — Archbishop Leighton.

"It is a weak and ignorant, but common thought of Christians, that they should not look for heaven, nor trust Christ for eternal glory, till they are well advanced in holiness and fitness for it. But just as the first sanctification of our natures flows from our faith and trust in Christ for acceptance, so our further sanctification and fitness for glory flows from the renewed and repeated exercise of faith in Him." — Traill.

¹⁸ The Westminster Confession of Faith gives an admirable account of justification: "Those whom God effectually calls, He also freely justified! — not by infusing righteousness into them, but by pardoning their sins, and by accounting and accepting their persons as righteous; not for anything wrought in them or done by them, but for Christ's sake alone; not by imputing faith itself, the act of believing, or any other evangelical obedience to them as their righteousness; but by

Many appear to forget that we are saved and justified as sinners, and only sinners; and that we can never attain to anything higher if we live to the age of Methuselah. Redeemed sinners, justified sinners, and renewed sinners, doubtless we must be — but sinners, sinners, sinners, we shall always be to the very last.

They do not seem to comprehend that there is a wide difference between our justification and our sanctification. Our justification is a perfect finished work, and it admits no degrees. Our sanctification is imperfect and incomplete, and will be so to the last hour of our life. They appear to expect that a believer may at some period of his life be in a measure free from corruption, and attain to a kind of inward perfection. And not finding this angelic state of things in their own hearts, they at once conclude there must be something very wrong in their state. And so they go mourning all their days — oppressed with fears that they have no part or lot in Christ, and refusing to be comforted.

Let us weigh this point well. If any believing soul desires assurance, and has not gotten it, let him ask himself, first of all, if he is quite sure that he is sound in the faith, if he knows how to distinguish things that differ, and if his eyes are thoroughly clear in the matter of justification. He must know what it means to simply believe and be justified by faith, before he can expect to feel assured.

In this matter, as well as in many others, the old Galatian heresy is the most fertile source of error, both in doctrine and in practice. People ought to seek clearer views of Christ, and what Christ has done for them. Happy is the man who really understands “justification by faith without the deeds of the law.” Rom 3.28

(2) Another common cause of the absence of assurance is, slothfulness about growth in grace.

I suspect that many true believers hold dangerous and unscriptural views on this point; I do not of course mean intentionally, but they do hold them. Many appear to think that, once converted, they have little more to attend to, and that a state of salvation is a kind of easy chair in which they may just sit still, lie back, and be happy. They seem to fancy that grace is given to them so that they may enjoy it; and they forget that it is given, like a talent, to be used, employed, and improved. Such persons lose sight of the many direct injunctions “to increase — to grow — to abound more and more — to add to our faith,” and the like. And in this little-doing condition, this sitting-still state of mind, I never marvel that they miss assurance.

I believe it ought to be our continual aim and desire to go forward. And our watchword on every returning birthday, and at the beginning of every year, should be, “More and more” (1Th 4.1): more knowledge — more faith — more obedience — more love. If we have produced thirtyfold, we should seek to produce sixty; and if we have produced sixty, we should strive to produce a hundred. The will of the Lord is our sanctification, and it ought to be our will too. (Mat 13.23; 1Th 4.3)

One thing we may depend upon, at all events, is that there is an inseparable connection between diligence and assurance. “Give diligence” says Peter, “to make your calling and election sure.” (2Pet 1.10) “We desire,” says Paul, “that every one of you show the same imputing the obedience and righteousness of Christ to them — they receiving and resting on Him and His righteousness, by faith.”

diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end.” (Heb 6.11) “The soul of the diligent,” says Solomon, “shall be made fat.” (Pro 13.4) There is much truth in the old maxim of the Puritans: “Faith of adherence comes by hearing, but faith of assurance does not come without doing.”

Is any reader of this paper one of those who desires assurance, but has not gotten it? Mark my words. You will never get it without diligence, however much you may desire it. There are no gains without pains in spiritual things, any more than in temporal. “The soul of the sluggard desires and has nothing.” (Pro 13.4) ¹⁹

(3) Another common cause of a lack of assurance is an inconsistent walk in life.

With grief and sorrow, I feel constrained to say that I fear nothing more frequently prevents men attaining an assured hope than this. The stream of professing Christianity in this day is far wider than it formerly was, and I am afraid that we must admit, at the same time, that it is much less deep.

Inconsistency of life is utterly destructive of peace of conscience. The two things are incompatible. They cannot and will not go together. If you would have your besetting sins, and cannot make up your minds to give them up — if you would shrink from cutting off the right hand and plucking out the right eye when occasion requires it — then I will engage that you will have no assurance.

- A vacillating walk
- A backwardness to take a bold and decided line
- A readiness to conform to the world
- A hesitating witness for Christ
- A lingering tone of religion
- A flinching from a high standard of holiness and spiritual life

All these make a sure receipt for bringing a blight upon the garden of your soul.

It is vain to suppose that you will feel assured and persuaded of your own pardon and acceptance with God, unless you count all God’s commandments concerning all things to be right, and hate every sin, whether great or small. (Psa 119.128) One Achan allowed in the camp of your heart will weaken your hands and lay your consolations low in the dust. You must be sowing to the Spirit daily, if you are to reap the witness of the Spirit. You will ¹⁹ “Whose fault is it that your interest in Christ is not put out of question? If Christians were more in self-examination, closer in walking with God, and if they had nearer communion with God, and acting more of faith, this shameful darkness and doubting would quickly vanish.” — Traill.

“A lazy Christian will always lack four things: comfort, contentment, confidence, and assurance. God has made a separation between joy and idleness, between assurance and laziness; and therefore, it is impossible for you to bring these together which God has put so far apart.” — Thomas Brooks.

“Are you in depths and doubts, staggering and uncertain, not knowing what is your condition, nor whether you have any interest in the forgiveness that is of God? Are you tossed up and down between hopes and fears, and want peace, consolation, and establishment? Why do you lie upon your faces? Get up: watch, pray, fast, meditate, offer violence to your lusts and corruptions; do not fear not, do not startle at their crying to be spared; press to the throne of grace by prayer, supplications, importunities, restless requests — this is the way to take the kingdom of God. Mat 11.12 These things are not peace; they are not assurance; but they are part of the means God has appointed for attaining them.” — Owen on the 130th Psalm.

not find and feel that all the Lord's ways are ways of pleasantness, unless you labour in all your ways to please the Lord. ²⁰

I bless God that our salvation in no way depends on our own works. We are saved by grace, through faith, without the deeds of the law — not by works of righteousness. But I would never have any believer forget for a moment that our SENSE of salvation depends much on the manner of our living. Inconsistency will dim our eyes, and bring clouds between us and the sun. The sun is the same behind the clouds, but you will not be able to see its brightness or enjoy its warmth, and your soul will be gloomy and cold. It is in the path of well doing that the dayspring of assurance will visit you, and shine down upon your heart.

- “The secret of the Lord,” says David, “is with those who fear Him, and He will show them His covenant.” (Psa 25.14)
 - “To him that orders his conduct aright, I will show the salvation of God.” (Psa 50.23)
 - “Great peace have those who love your law, and nothing shall offend them.” (Psa 119.165)
 - “If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship with one another.” (1Joh 1.7)
 - “Let us not love in word, or in tongue; but in deed and in truth; and hereby we know that we are of the truth, and will assure our hearts before Him.” (1Joh 3.18, 19)
 - “Hereby we do know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments.” (1Joh 2.3)
- Paul was a man who exercised himself to always have a conscience void of offence toward God and man. (Act 24.16) He could say with boldness, “I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith.” Therefore, I do not wonder that the Lord enabled him to add with confidence, “Henceforth there is a crown laid up for me, and the Lord shall give it me at that day.” ^{2Tim 4.7-8}

If any believer in the Lord Jesus desires assurance, and has not gotten it, let him think over this point also. Let him look at his own heart, look at his own conscience, look at his own life, look at his own ways, look at his own home. And perhaps when he has done that, he will be able to say, “There is a reason why I have no assured hope.”

I leave the three matters I have just mentioned to the private consideration of every reader of this paper. I am sure they are worth examining. May we examine them honestly. And may the Lord give us understanding in all things.

(1) And now, in closing this important inquiry, let me speak first to those readers who have not yet given themselves to the Lord, who have not yet come out from the world, chosen the good part, and followed Christ.

I ask you, then, to learn from this subject, the privileges and comforts of a true Christian.

²⁰ “Would you have your hope strong? Then keep your conscience pure: you cannot defile one without weakening the other. The godly person who is loose and careless in his holy walking will soon find his hope languishing. All sin disposes the soul that tampers with it, to trembling fears and shakings of heart.” — Gurnall.

“One great and too common cause of distress is secretly maintaining some known sin: it puts out the eye of the soul, or dims it and stupefies it, so that it can neither see nor feel its own condition; but especially, it provokes God to withdraw Himself, His comforts, and the assistance of His Spirit.” — Baxter's Saints' Rest.

“The stars which have the least circuit are nearest the pole; and men whose hearts are least entangled with the world are always nearest to God and to the assurance of His favour. Worldly Christians, remember this: you and the world must part, or else assurance and your souls will never meet.” — Thomas Brooks.

I would not have you judge the Lord Jesus Christ by His people. The best of servants can give you but a faint idea of that glorious Master. Nor would I have you judge the privileges of His kingdom by the measure of comfort to which many of His people attain. Alas, most of us are poor creatures! We come short, very short, of the blessedness we might enjoy. But depend upon it, there are glorious things in the city of our God, which those who have an assured hope taste, even in their lifetime. There are lengths and breadths of peace and consolation there, which it has not entered into your heart to conceive. There is bread enough and to spare in our Father's house, though many of us certainly eat but little of it, and continue weak. But the fault must not be laid to our Master's charge: it is all our own.

And after all, the weakest child of God has a mine of comforts within him, of which you know nothing. You see the conflicts and tossings of the surface of his heart, but you do not see the pearls of great price which are hidden in the depths below. The feeblest member of Christ would not change conditions with you. The believer who possesses the least assurance is far better off than you are. He has a hope, however faint — but you have none at all. He has,

- a portion that will never be taken from him,
- a Saviour who will never forsake him,
- a treasure that does not fade away,

however little he may realize all this at present. But as for you, if you die as you are, your expectations will all perish. Oh, that you were wise! Oh, that you understood these things! Oh, that you would consider your final end!

I feel deeply for you in these latter days of the world, if I ever did. I feel deeply for those whose treasure is all on earth, and whose hopes are all on this side of the grave. Yes! When I see old kingdoms and dynasties shaking to the very foundation — when I see, as we all saw a few years ago, kings and princes and rich men and great men fleeing for their lives, scarcely knowing where to hide their heads — when I see property dependent on public confidence melting like snow in the spring, and public stocks and funds losing their value — when I see these things, I feel deeply for those who have no better portion than this world can give them, and no place in that kingdom which cannot be removed. ²¹

Take advice from a minister of Christ this very day. Seek durable riches — a treasure that cannot be taken from you — a city which has lasting foundations. Do as the Apostle Paul did. Give yourself to the Lord Jesus Christ, and seek that incorruptible crown which He is ready to bestow. Take His yoke upon you, and learn from Him. Come away from a world which will never really satisfy you, and from sin which will at last bite like a serpent if you cling to it. Come to the Lord Jesus as lowly sinners, and He will receive you, pardon you, give you His renewing Spirit, fill you with peace. This will give you more real comfort than the world has ever done. There is a gulf in your heart which nothing but the peace of Christ can fill. Enter in and share our privileges. Come with us, and sit down by our side.

(2) Lastly, let me turn to all believers who read these pages, and speak a few words of brotherly counsel to them.

²¹ “They are doubly miserable who have neither heaven nor earth, temporals nor eternal, made sure to them in changing times.” — Thomas Brooks.

The main thing that I urge upon you is this: if you have not gotten an assured hope of your own acceptance in Christ, resolve this day to seek it. Labour for it. Strive after it. Pray for it. Give the Lord no rest till you “know whom you have believed.”

I feel, indeed, that the small amount of assurance in this day, among those who are reckoned to be God’s children, is a shame and a reproach. “It is a thing to be heavily bewailed,” says old Traill, “that many Christians have lived twenty or forty years since Christ called them by His grace, yet doubting in their life.” Let us call to mind the earnest “desire” Paul expresses, that “every one” of the Hebrews should seek full assurance; and let us endeavour, by God’s blessing, to roll this reproach away. (Heb 6.11)

Believing reader, do you really mean to say that you have no desire to exchange hope for confidence, trust for persuasion, uncertainty for knowledge? Because weak faith will save you, will you therefore rest content with it? Because assurance is not essential to your entrance into heaven, will you therefore be satisfied without it on earth? Alas, this is not a healthy state of soul to be in; this is not the mind of the Apostolic day! Arise at once and go forward. Do not stay at the foundations of religion: go on to perfection. Do not be content with a day of small things. Never despise it in others, but never be content with it in yourself.

Believe me, believe me, assurance is worth seeking. You forsake your own mercies when you rest content without it. The things I speak are for your peace. If it is good to be sure in earthly things, then how much better is it to be sure in heavenly things! Your salvation is a fixed and certain thing. God knows it. Why should not you seek to know it too? There is nothing unscriptural in this. Paul never saw the Book of Life, and yet Paul says, “I know and am persuaded.”

Make it then your daily prayer that you may have an increase of faith. Your peace will be according to your faith. Cultivate that blessed root more, and sooner or later, by God’s blessing, you may hope to have the flower. You may not perhaps attain to full assurance all at once. It is good sometimes to be kept waiting: we do not value things which we get without trouble. But though it tarry, wait for it. Seek on, and expect to find.

There is one thing, however, of which I would not have you ignorant: — You must not be surprised if you have occasional doubts, even after you have assurance. You must not forget that you are on earth, and not in heaven. You are still in the body, and have indwelling sin: the flesh will lust against the spirit to the very end. The leprosy will never be out of the walls of the old house till death takes it down. And there is a devil, too, and a strong devil: a devil who tempted the Lord Jesus, and gave Peter a fall; and he will take care that you know it. There will always be some doubts. He that never doubts has nothing to lose. He that never fears possesses nothing truly valuable. He that is never jealous knows little of deep love. Do not be discouraged: you will be more than a conqueror through Him who loved you. ²²

“It is very suspicious that a person who is always in the same frame, is a hypocrite, let him pretend it to be ever so good.” — Traill.

Finally, do not forget that assurance is a thing which may be lost for a season, even by the brightest Christians, unless they take care.

Assurance is a most delicate plant. It needs daily, hourly watching, watering, tending, cherishing. So watch and pray more, once you have it. As Rutherford says, “Make much of assurance.” Always be on your guard. In Pilgrim’s Progress, when Christian slept in the arbour, he lost his certificate. Keep that in mind.

David lost assurance for many months by falling into transgression. Peter lost it when he denied his Lord. Each found it again, undoubtedly, but not till after bitter tears. Spiritual darkness comes on horseback, and it goes away on foot. It is upon us before we know that it is coming. It leaves us slowly, gradually, and not till after many days. It is easy to run downhill. It is hard work to climb uphill. So, remember my caution: when you have the joy of the Lord, watch and pray.

Above all, do not grieve the Spirit. Do not quench the Spirit. Do not vex the Spirit. Do not drive Him to a distance, by toying with small bad habits and little sins. Little jarrings between husbands and wives make unhappy homes; and petty inconsistencies, known and allowed, will bring a strangeness between you and the Spirit.

Hear the conclusion of the whole matter. The man who most closely walks with God in Christ, will generally be kept in the greatest peace.

The believer who follows the Lord most fully and aims at the highest degree of holiness, will ordinarily enjoy the most assured hope, and have the clearest persuasion of his own salvation.

NOTE – Extracts from English Divines
(Referred to in footnote)

Extracts from English Divines, showing that there is a difference between faith and assurance — that a believer may be justified and accepted with God, and yet not enjoy a comfortable knowledge and persuasion of his own safety — and that the weakest faith in Christ, if it is true, will save a man as surely as the strongest.

(1) “The mercy of God is greater than all the sins in the world. But we sometimes are in such a state, that we think we have no faith at all; or if we have any, it is very feeble and weak. And therefore, these are two separate things: to have faith, and to have the feeling of faith. For some men would gladly have the feeling of faith, but they cannot attain it. And yet they must not despair, but instead go forward in calling upon God, and it will come at length: God will open their hearts and let them feel His goodness.” — Bishop Larimer’s Sermons. 1552.

(2) “A man’s weak faith may fail in applying, or in apprehending and appropriating Christ’s benefits for himself. This is to be seen in ordinary experience. For there is many a man of humble and contrite heart, who serves God in spirit and truth, and yet is not able to say without great doubtings and waverings, I know and am fully assured that my sins are pardoned. Now, shall we say that all such men are without faith? God forbid!

“This weak faith will as truly apprehend God’s merciful promises for the pardon of sin as strong faith, though not as soundly — even as a man with a palsied hand can just as well stretch it out to receive a gift from the hand of a king as one who is sounder, though it may not be as firmly and steadfastly.” — Exposition of the Creed, by William Perkins, Minister of Christ in the University of Cambridge. 1612.

(3) “This certainty of our salvation, spoken of by Paul, repeated by Peter, and mentioned by David (Psa 4.7), is that special fruit of faith, which breeds spiritual joy and inward peace, and which surpasses all understanding. It is true: all God’s children do not have it. One thing is the tree, and another is the fruit of the tree: one thing is faith, and another is the fruit of faith. And that remnant of God’s elect who feel the shortcomings of this faith, have faith notwithstanding.” — Sermons by Richard Greenham, Minister and Preacher of the Word of God. 1612.

(4) “Some think they have no faith at all, because they have no full assurance. Yet the fairest fire that can be, will have some smoke.” — The Bruised Reed, by Richard Sibbes, Master of Catherine Hall, Cambridge, and Preacher of Gray’s Inn, London. 1630.

(5) “The act of faith is to apply Christ to the soul; and the weakest faith can do this as well as the strongest, if it is true. A child can hold a staff as well as a man, though not so strongly. The prisoner sees the sun through a hole, though not so perfectly as those in the open air. Those who saw the brazen serpent, though a great way off, were yet healed.

“The least faith is as precious to the believer’s soul as Peter’s or Paul’s faith was to them; for it lays hold upon Christ and brings eternal salvation.” — An Exposition of the Second Epistle General of Peter, by the Rev Thomas Adams, Rector of St. Gregory’s, London. 1633.

(6) “Weak faith is true faith — as precious, though not so great as strong faith: the same Holy Ghost is the author; the same Gospel is the instrument.

“If it never proves great, yet weak faith shall save; for it interests us in Christ,²³ and makes Him and all His benefits ours. For it is not the strength of our faith that saves, but the truth of our faith — not the weakness of our faith that condemns, but the lack of faith; for the least faith lays hold on Christ, and so it will save us. Neither are we saved by the worth or quantity of our faith, but by Christ, who is laid hold on by a weak faith, as well as a strong faith. Just as a weak hand that can put food into the mouth, will feed and nourish the body as well as if it were a strong hand, seeing that the body is not nourished by the strength of the hand, but by the goodness of the food.” — The Doctrine of Faith, by John Rogers, Preacher of God’s Word, at Dedham, in Essex. 1634.

(7) “It is one thing to have a thing surely, and another to know I have it surely. We seek many things that we have in our hands, and we have many things that we think we have lost. So too with a believer who has a sure belief yet does not always know that he so believes. Faith is necessary to salvation: but full assurance that I do believe is not of like necessity.” — Ball on Faith. 1637.

(8) “There is a weak faith which yet is a true faith; and although it is weak, yet because it is true, it shall not be rejected by Christ.

“Faith is not created perfect at first, as Adam was; but it is like a man in the ordinary course of nature, who is first an instrument, then a child, then a youth, then a man.

“Some utterly reject all weak faith, and assess all weakness in faith as hypocrisy. Certainly these are either proud or cruel men.

“Some comfort and establish those who are weak, saying, ‘Be quiet. You have faith and grace enough, and are good enough: you need no more, nor should you be too righteous.’ (Ecc 7.16) These are soft cushions, but not safe: these are fawning flatterers, not faithful friends.

“Some comfort and exhort, saying, ‘Be of good cheer: He who has begun a good work will also finish it in you; therefore pray that His grace may abound in you; indeed do not sit still, but go forward, and march on in the way of the Lord.’ (Heb 6.1) Now, this is the safest and best course.”

²³ Faith unites us to Christ, gaining us an interest or portion in Christ (an inheritance as co-heirs with him).

— Questions, Observations, etc., upon the Gospel according to St. Matthew, by Richard Ward, sometime Student at Cambridge, and Preacher of the Gospel in London. 1640.

(9) “A man may be in the favour of God, in the state of grace, a justified man before God, and yet lack the sensible assurance of His salvation and of the favour of God in Christ.

“A man may have saving grace in him, and not perceive it himself; a man may have true justifying faith in him, and not have the use and operation of it so far as to work in him a comfortable assurance of his reconciliation with God. Indeed, I will say more: a man may be in the state of grace, and have true justifying faith in him, and yet be so far from a sensible assurance of it in himself, as in his own sense and feeling he may seem to be assured of the contrary. Job was certainly in this case when he cried unto God, ‘Why do You hide your face and regard me as Your enemy?’ (Job 13.24)

“The weakest faith will justify. If you can receive Christ and rest upon Him, even with the weakest faith, it will serve your turn. Take heed that you do not think it is the strength of your faith that justifies you. No, no: what does it is Christ and His perfect righteousness, which your faith receives and rests upon. He that has the feeblest and weakest hand may receive alms and apply a sovereign plaster to his wound, as well as he that has the strongest, and he receives as much good by it too.” — Lectures on the 51st Psalm, preached at Ashby-de-la-Zouch, by Arthur Hildersam, Minister of Jesus Christ. 1642.

(10) “Though your grace is ever so weak, if you have truth of grace, you have as great a share in the righteousness of Christ for your justification as the strong Christian does. You have as much of Christ imputed to you as any other.” — Sermons by William Bridge, formerly Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and Pastor of the Church of Christ, in Great Yarmouth. 1648.

(1) “There are some who are true believers, and yet weak in faith. They do indeed receive Christ and free grace, but it is with a shaking hand; they have, as divines say, the faith of adherence; they will stick to Christ as theirs. But they lack the faith of evidence; they cannot see themselves as His. They are believers, but of little faith; they hope that Christ will not cast them out, but are not sure that He will take them up.” — Sips of Sweetness, or Consolation for Weak Relievers, by John Durant, Preacher in Canterbury Cathedral. 1649.

(12) You say, “I know that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, and that ‘whoever believes in Him shall not perish, but have eternal life.’ (John 3.15) Nor can I help but know that, in a sense of my own sinful condition, I cast myself in some measure upon my Saviour, and lay some hold upon His all-sufficient redemption: But alas, my apprehensions of Him are so feeble, that they can afford no sound comfort to my soul!

“Courage, my son. If you had looked to be justified and saved by the power of the very act of your faith, you would have had reason to be disheartened with the conviction of its weakness. But now that the virtue and efficacy of this happy work is in the object that you apprehended, which is the infinite merits and mercy of your God and Saviour, which cannot be abated by your infirmities, you have cause to take heart, and to cheerfully expect His salvation.

“Understand your case aright. Here is a double hand, that helps us up toward Heaven. Our hand of faith lays hold upon our Saviour; our Saviour’s hand of mercy and plenteous redemption lays hold on us. Our hold of Him is feeble and easily loosed; His hold of us is strong and irresistible.

“If your works were stood upon, then a strength of hand would be necessary; but now that only taking and receiving a precious gift is required, why may not a weak hand do that as well as a strong one? As well, though not as forcibly.” — Bishop Hall’s “Balm of Gilead.” 1650.

(13) “I do not find that salvation is put upon the strength of faith, but the truth of faith — not upon the brightest degree, but upon any degree of faith. It is not said, If you have such a degree of faith, you shall be justified and saved; but simply believing is required. The lowest degree of true faith will do it, as in Romans 10.9: ‘If you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus, and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you shall be saved.’ The thief upon the cross had not attained to such high degrees of faith: by one act, and that of a weak faith, he was justified and saved. (Luk 23.42)” — Exposition of the Prophet Ezekiel, by William Greenhill, Rector of Stepney, London, and Chaplain to the Dukes of York and Gloucester. 1650.

(14) “A man may have true grace that does not have the assurance of the love and favour of God, or of the remission of his sins and the salvation of his soul. A man may be God’s, and yet not know it; his estate may be good, and yet he does not see it; he may be in a safe condition, when he is not in a comfortable position. All may be well with him in the court of glory, when he would give a thousand worlds that all were only well in the court of conscience.

“Assurance is requisite to the well-being of a Christian, but not to his being; it is requisite to the consolation of a Christian, but not to his salvation; it is requisite to the well-being of grace, but not to the mere being of grace. Though a man cannot be saved without faith, yet he may be saved without assurance. In many places of the Scripture, God has declared that without faith there is no salvation; but God has not in any place of Scripture declared that without assurance there is no salvation.” — Heaven on Earth, by Thomas Brooks, Preacher of the Gospel, at St. Margaret’s, Fish Street Hill, London. 1654.

(15) “You that can make this clear to your own hearts, that you have faith even though it is weak, do not be discouraged; do not be troubled. Consider that the smallest degree of true faith, is as saving as the greatest faith. A spark of fire is as true a fire as any in the element of fire. A drop of water is as true water as any in the ocean. So the least grain of faith is as true and as saving as the greatest faith in the world.

“The least bud draws sap from the root as well as the greatest bough. So the weakest measure of faith as truly ingrafts you into Christ, and draws life from Christ by it, as the strongest. The weakest faith has communion with the merits and blood of Christ as well as the strongest.

“The least faith marries the soul to Christ. The weakest faith has as equal a share in God’s love as the strongest. We are beloved in Christ, and the least measure of faith makes us members of Christ. The least faith has equal right to the promises as the strongest. And therefore, do not let our souls be discouraged by weakness.” — Nature and Royalties of Faith, by Samuel Bolton, D.D., of Christ’s College, Cambridge. 1657.

(16) “Some are afraid they have no faith at all, because they do not have the highest degree of faith, which is full assurance; or because they lack the comfort which others attain to — even joy unspeakable and full of glory. ^{1Pet 1.8} But for rolling this stone out of the way, we must remember there are several degrees of faith. It is possible you may have faith, though not the highest degree of faith, and so have joy in the Spirit. That is a point of faith rather than faith itself. It is indeed living by sense rather than living by faith, when we are cheered with continual cordials. A stronger faith is required to live upon God without comfort, than when God shines on our spirit with an abundance of joy.” — Matthew Lawrence, Preacher at Ipswich, on Faith. 1657.

(17) “If any person abroad has thought that a special and full persuasion of the pardon of their sin was of the essence of faith, let them answer for it. Our divines at home generally are of another judgment. Bishop Davenant and Bishop Prideaux, and others, have shown the great difference between resting ²⁴ and assurance; and they all account and call assurance a daughter, a fruit and consequent, of faith. And the late learned Arrowsmith tells us that God seldom bestows assurance on believers till they have grown in grace: for, he says, there is the same difference between faith of resting and faith of assurance, as there is between reason and learning. Reason is the foundation of learning. Just as there can be no learning if reason is lacking (as in beasts), in like manner, there can be no assurance where there is no faith of adherence. Again, just as reason well-exercised in the study of arts and sciences rises to learning, so faith being well-exercised on its proper object, and by its proper fruits, rises to assurance. Further, learning may be lost by negligence, non-attendance, or some violent disease, while reason abides; so too, assurance may be lost by temptation, or by spiritual sloth, while saving faith abides. Lastly, just as all men have reason, but all men are not learned, so all regenerate persons have faith to comply savingly with the gospel method of salvation, but all true believers may not have assurance.” — Sermon by R. Fair dough, Fellow of Immanuel College, Cambridge, in the Morning Exercises, preached at Southwark. 1660.

²⁴ Originally “recumbrance” i.e., recumbence – leaning, resting, or reclining against something.

(18) We must distinguish between weakness of faith and nullity. A weak faith is still true. The bruised reed is but weak, yet it is one that Christ will not break. Though your faith is but weak, yet do not be discouraged. A weak faith may receive a strong Christ; a weak hand can tie the knot in marriage as well as a strong; a weak eye might have seen the brazen serpent. The promise is not made to strong faith, but to true faith. The promise does not say, Whoever has a giant faith that can remove mountains, that can stop the mouth of lions, shall be saved — but whoever believes, however small his faith.

“You may have the water of the Spirit poured on you in sanctification, though not the oil of gladness in assurance; there may be faith of adherence, and not of evidence; there may be life in the root where there is no fruit in the branches, and faith in the heart where there is no fruit of assurance.” — A Body of Divinity, by Thomas Watson, formerly Minister of St. Stephen’s, Walbrook, London. 1660.

(19) “Many of God’s dear children may remain very doubtful for a long time as to their present and eternal condition, and not know what to conclude — whether they will be damned or be saved. There are believers of several growths in the Church of God — fathers, young men, children, and babes; and just as in most families there are more babes and children than grown men, so in the Church of God there are more weak, doubting Christians than strong ones, grown up to a full assurance. A babe may be born, and yet not know it; so a man may be born again, and yet not be sure of it.

“We make a difference between saving faith, as such, and a full persuasion of the heart. Some of those who will be saved may not be certain that they will be saved; for the promise is made to the grace of faith, and not to the evidence of it — to faith as true, and not to faith as strong. They may be sure of heaven, and yet in their own sense, not be assured of heaven.” — Sermon by Rev Thomas Doolittle, of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, and sometime Rector of St. Alphege, London, in the Morning Exercises, at Cripplegate. 1661.

(20) “Is it not necessary to justification to be assured that my sins are pardoned, and that I am justified? No, that is not an act of faith as it justifies, but an effect and fruit that follows after justification.

“It is one thing for a man to have his salvation certain, another thing to be certain that it is certain.

“A man fallen into a river and likely to be drowned, as he is carried down with the flood, espies the bough of a tree hanging over the river. He catches at it, and clings to it with all his might to save himself. Seeing no other way of succour than that, he ventures his life upon it. This man, as soon as he fastened on this bough, was in a safe condition — though all troubles, fears, and terrors are not quickly out of his mind until he comes to himself, and sees himself quite out of danger. Then he is sure that he is safe — but he was safe before he was sure. It is the same with a believer. Faith is but espying Christ as the only means to save, and reaching out the heart to lay hold on Him. ‘God has spoken the word, and made the promise to His Son: I believe Him to be the only Saviour, and I remit my soul to Him to be saved by His mediation.’ As soon as the soul can do this, God imputes the righteousness of His Son to it, and it is actually justified in the court of heaven, though it is not quickly quieted and pacified in the court of conscience. That is done afterwards: in some it is sooner, in some later, by the fruits and effects of justification.” — Archbishop Usher’s “Body of Divinity.” 1670.

(21) “There are those who doubt because they doubt, and who multiply distrust upon itself, concluding that they have no faith because they find so much and such frequent doubting within themselves. But this is a great mistake. There may be some doubting where there is yet much faith; and there may be a little faith where there is much doubting.

“Our Saviour requires and delights in a strong, firm believing on Him, though He does not reject the least and weakest believing.” — Archbishop Leighton’s Lectures on the first nine chapters of St. Matthew’s Gospel. 1670.

(22) “Many formerly, and those of the highest remark and eminence, have placed true faith in no lower degree than assurance — or the secure persuasion of the pardon of their sins, the acceptance of their persons, and their future salvation.

“But this is very sad and uncomfortable for thousands of doubting and deserted souls, concluding that all those who fall short of certainty, fall short of grace; and so it has given the Papists too great an advantage.

“Faith is not assurance. But assurance sometimes crowns and rewards a strong, vigorous, and heroic faith. The Spirit of God breaks in upon the soul with an evidencing light, scattering all that darkness, and those fears and doubts which before clouded it.” — Bishop Hopkins on the Covenants. 1680.

(23) “A lack of assurance is not unbelief. Believers may be drooping spirits. There is a manifest distinction made between faith in Christ, and the comfort of that faith — between believing unto eternal life, and knowing that we have eternal life. There is a difference between a child’s having a right to an estate, and his full knowledge of the title.

“The character of faith may be written in the heart, as letters engraven upon a seal, yet filled with so much dust as not to be distinguished. The dust hinders the reading of the letters, yet it does not raze them out.” — Discourses by Stephen Charnock, of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. 1680.

(24) “Some rob themselves of their own comfort by placing saving faith in full assurance. Faith, and sense of faith, are two distinct and separable mercies; you may have truly received Christ, and not receive the knowledge or assurance of it. There are some who say, ‘You are our God,’ of whom God never said, ‘You are my people;’ these have no authority to be called the sons of God. There are others of whom God says, ‘These are my people,’ and yet they dare not call God ‘their God;’ these have authority to be called the sons of God, yet do not know it. They have received Christ; that is their safety. But they have not yet received the knowledge and assurance of it; that is their trouble.... The father owns his child in the cradle, who does not yet know him to be his father.” — Method of Grace, by John Flavel, Minister of the Gospel at Dartmouth, Devon. 1680.

(25) “It is confessed that weak faith has as much peace with God through Christ, as another has by strong faith — but not so much bosom-peace.

“Weak faith will land the Christian in heaven as surely as strong faith, for it is impossible that the least dram of true grace should perish, being all incorruptible seed; but the weak, doubting Christian is not likely to have so pleasant a voyage there as another with strong faith. Though everyone in the ship comes safe to shore, yet he that is sea-sick all the way does not have so comfortable a voyage as he that is strong and healthy.” — The Christian in Complete Armour, by William Gurnall, sometime Ejector of Lavenham, Suffolk. 1680.

(26) “Do not be discouraged if it does not yet appear to you that you were given by the Father to the Son. It may be, though you do not see it. Many of the given do not know it for a long time; indeed I see no great danger in saying that not a few of those given to the Son may be in darkness, and doubts, and fears about it, till the last and brightest day declares it, and till the last sentence proclaims it.

“Therefore, if any of you are in the dark about your own election, do not be discouraged: it may be, though you do not know it.” — Sermons on the Lord’s Prayer, by Robert Traill, Minister of the Gospel, in London, and sometime at Cranbrook, Kent. 1690.

(27) “Assurance is not essential to the being of faith. It is a strong faith; but we read likewise of a weak faith, little faith, faith like a grain of mustard seed. True saving faith in Jesus Christ is only distinguishable by its different degrees; but in every degree and in every subject, it is universally of the same kind.” — Sermons, by the Key. John Newton, sometime Vicar of Olney, and Rector of St. Mary, Woolnoth, London. 1767.

(28) “There is no reason why weak believers should conclude against themselves. Weak faith unites with Christ as really as strong faith — as the least bud in the vine is drawing sap and life from the root, no less than the strongest branch. Weak believers, therefore, have abundant cause to be thankful; and while they reach after growth in grace, they should not overlook what they have already received.” — Letter of Rev Henry Venn. 1784.

(29) “The faith necessary and sufficient for our salvation is not assurance. Its tendency doubtless is to produce that lively expectation of the Divine favour which will issue in a full confidence. But the confidence is not itself the faith of which we speak, nor is it necessarily included in it: indeed, it is a totally distinct thing.

“Assurance will generally accompany a high degree of faith. But there are sincere persons who are endued with only small measures of grace, or in whom the exercise of that grace may be greatly obstructed. When such defects or hindrances prevail, many fears and distresses may be expected to arise.” — The Christian System, by the Rev Thomas Robinson, Vicar of St. Mary’s, Leicester. 1795.

(30) “Salvation, and the joy of salvation, are not always contemporaneous; the latter does not always accompany the former in present experience.

“A sick man may be under a process of recovery, and yet be in doubt concerning the restoration of his health. Pain and weakness may cause him to hesitate. A child may be heir to an estate or kingdom, and yet derive no joy from the prospect of his future inheritance. He may be unable to trace his genealogy, or to read his title-deeds and the testament of his father; or with a capacity of reading them, he may be unable to understand their import, and his guardian may deem it right to allow him to remain in ignorance for a time. But his ignorance does not affect the validity of his title.

“Personal assurance of salvation is not necessarily connected with faith. They are not essentially the same. Every believer might indeed infer from the effect produced in his own heart, his own safety and privileges; but many who truly believe are unskilful in the word of righteousness, and they fail to draw the conclusion from Scriptural premises which they would be justified in drawing.” — Lectures on the 51st Psalm, by the Rev Thomas Biddulph, Minister of St. James’s, Bristol. 1830.
